It is somewhat strange, that so many warnings of the severe Prosecution of our English Laws, are of no more prevalency then so little to be minded by these kind of people, whose direct course is to sterat their own over-throws.

The Aching hearts, and bleeding minds of tender Parents, cannot work sufficiently on such who do wilfully carelessly bring themselves into a Snare, which nothing but a shamfull End can put a period to.

And that all people may take warning by these offenders, I think convenient to nominate them who are condemned to Dye, to be Transported, and to be whipp'd, namely William Fellows. William Hopkins,
